Description

If I have this structure:

Page1
-- Page2
-- Page3

and delete with subpages is not set, I have to first delete Page2 and Page3 and can then delete Page1. Now with workspaces I have to first delete Page2 and Page3 -> Publish the deletion -> delete Page1. For me the publish step is unnecessary, the subpages check should check for subpages in the workspace.

what do you think?

I've been able to reproduce the workflow and I think I found a solution.
Although I still appreciate feedback.

This is "solved": We changed the delete behavior in v11 / master - users can now always delete recursive.

I also played around on this with v11: Have a page with a sub page in LIVE. Switch to some workspace, delete page (->works, page and sub page disappear from page tree). Technically, a delete placeholder record is created for page, but NOT for sub page. If then publishing the page, both page and sub page are set to deleted in live. That looks fine.

I'll close the issue for now.
