Description
t3editor CTRL + S works on Opera but Opera decides to save the whole website too, at least on Windows Vista Open a template with t3editor within latest Opera Version. Type something Press CTRL + S. Popup 'file save dialog' ist opening, but you can recognize that the t3editor saves the template in background correctly (issue imported from #M12432) pretty old report but this doesn't appear to be the case anymore, it just saves the page for me.

This bug is still valid for Opera 12.16 (x86) with TYPO3 4.7 with t3editor 4.7.7 on Windows 7 x64.

I don't know... in fact since version 15 (July, 2013), Opera switched to Blink engine (and subsequent javascript engine), so it should behave as Chrome or Chromium browser (in fact, it is currently based on Chromium); the latest version is 29.

OMG

I can't test it on a vista, i removed all occurrences of vista about ten years ago ...

So I tested it again on 6.2.12 with opera 12.16 on a x86_64 Linux, and everything works fine.

Although I am a little bit disappointed that there are still yet no file-icons for extension .ts ... but this is another story, which could be told by someone else ... ;)

I am pretty sure, the issue could be closed!
