Bug # 92641 (New): felogin feature collection

It is not possible to force felogin into a certain display mode

Description

felogin decides what to display according to the passed pivars, in the following code section in tx_felogin_pi1:

```
// What to display
$content='';
if ($this->piVars['forgot']) {
    $content .= $this->showForgot();
} elseif ($this->piVars['forgothash']) {
    $content .= $this->changePassword();
} else {
    if($this->userIsLoggedIn && !$this->logintype) {
        $content .= $this->showLogout();
    } else {
        $content .= $this->showLogin();
    }

This makes it impossible to have, for example, a login form (LF) and a "forgot password" form (FP) on the same page because even when setting default pivars from typoscript, the LF will turn into a "forgot password" when the FP form is submitted, because it sets the "forgot" pivar.

My idea would be to introduce a "mode" config variable, so that you can force the mode like this:

```
plugin.tx_felogin_pi1.mode = forgot
```
