Description

Currently the XLIFF files provided with the Core are "en" -> "en" translation files, and this is a wrong design.

English localization files should only contain the source attribute to become templates for the different localizations.

The command use to process all the file, is xmlstarlet:

```
xmlstarlet ed -u "/xliff/file[@date]/@date" -v $(date -u +"%Y-%m-%dT%H:%M:%SZ") file.xlf | \
xmlstarlet ed -d "/xliff/file/body/trans-unit/target" | \
xmlstarlet ed -d "/xliff/file[@target-language]/@target-language" | \
xmlstarlet ed -d "/xliff/file/body/trans-unit[@approved]/@approved" | \
xmlstarlet ed -u "/xliff/file[@source-language]/@source-language" -v en | \
xmlindent -t

[TASK] English XLIFF files should not contain target element

Pootle uses the English XLIFF file has the template language and as such it does not make sense to have "en" -> "en" translation files.

English XLIFF files are templates and should contain only a 'source', not a 'target' element.

This commit contains:

- Remove of the target elements
- Remove target-language attribute
- Set the date attribute to the correct format
- Remove approved attribute
