Description

Validators currently can invent any option on the fly, have to check them manually and they cannot be extracted for documentation automatically.

This should be changed.

[!!!][FEATURE] Check validator options and make them self-documenting

Validators now must declare any options they accept using the class property `$supportedOptions`. It is indexed by option name and holds an array for each option giving the default value, a description, type and an optional required flag.

This is used to check accepted options and to generate option documentation for the validator reference documentation.
