Description
I request to have a code-list again in felogin. In the current project I'm using felogin with salted password (v6.0.0alpha2). On the site the loginbox is on every page (per TypoScript) and next I have a single page with the felogin plugin for the forgotten password or error redirect. A click on the "Password forgotten" link on the widget of every page, brings me to the page with the felogin plugin. You can guess what happen now. The widget get's the same content as the plugin. Normally it was possible to set the widget as raw HTML. But this ist not possible using salted password. I suggest to use a code list in the settings, where the diffrent templates can be selected. So if TS is set to <pre>plugin.tx_felogin_pi1.code = login,logout</pre> And the current action is "Password forgotten", than it should fallback to login if the user is logged out or fallback to logout if the user is logged in. Thanks a lot!

Umm I am very sorry for this late answer, and maybe I am wrong, but... can't a Typoscript condition be used here?

#3 - 2015-12-30 10:49 - Arno Dudek

Actually I don't know if the problem still exists. I think a TS condition will not help here, cause it was not possible to define the "template" by TS. The widget was defined by TS – it's simmlar to the login box on typo3.org in the top right. The password forgotten was a content element. On click "password forgotten" you see the password forgotten template in the content element and in the widget on the top right.

I Guess that the problem is still there;
the only workaround I could think of at the moment is (if possible) to remove the widget on the page with the login content element (that IMO could be useful from the usability point of view)
