Description

The PhpFrontend automatically wraps the given string of code before setting it in the backend:

```
$sourceCode = '<?php' . chr(10) . $sourceCode . chr(10) . '#';
```

On get() the wrapped first and last line should be removed so you can retrieve the original piece of code that was stored in the cache.

[TASK] PhpFrontend has a method to return original code

With this change the PhpFrontend has the added method `getWrappend()`, which returns the code including the automatically added php opening tag and ending line. The method `get()` returns exactly the same string that was stored in the cache.
