Description

If you add an image to an Image-CE, you may add a title which is rendered as title attribute in the output.

If you additionally add a link to the image and add a title for that as well (I attached an example), the default Typoscript setting of "styles.content.imgtext.titleInLink = 1" will result in a duplicate title on the rendered link:

History

#1 - 2014-12-29 16:11 - Riccardo De Contardi

Tested with TYPO3 6.2.9:

- 1) add an image CE
- 1.1) add Title attribute "IMAGETITLE" to the image
- 1.2) result:

=>OK

- 2) add a link to the image
- 2.1) result:

=>THE TITLE ATTRIBUTE HAS BEEN MOVED TO THE ANCHOR!!

- 3) add a title attribute "LINKTITLE" to the link
- 3.1) result:

=>NO DUPLICATED ATTRIBUTE, BUT THE LINK TITLE HAS OVERRIDDEN THE PREVIOUS ONE

Thanks for testing this. That's the expected behaviour.
The bug is therefore only present in 6.1, which is not supported anymore.
Closing this issue.

Thank you. I have not checked but IMHO if it is the expected behavior it should be described in some documentation, as (IMHO again) it is not much intuitive.

Thank you for your attention and best regards

Well, no idea which documentation would be the right place. But what else would you suggest? Having a title on the link and the image would always hide the one from the image.

you are right, the only thing I was thinking of is that if someone adds an attribute to a tag, he/she could find a bit "weird" to see it applied to another, that's all ;)
