Description
TYPO3 7.6 Editor uses the new page wizard and get confused on where the new page will be created looking at the tree of "Select a position for the new page:" The indentation of the pages in the tree is wrong showing pages and sub-pages on the same level.  TYPO3 6.2 was simply right and clear.

History

#1 - 2016-01-27 10:52 - Christian Toffolo

- File Capture2.PNG added

This is how the wizard looks in 4.7
I don't have a 6.2 actually but if I remember well was pretty the same.

- File cattura.png added

I add a further weird behavior (I tested with the latest master 8.0-dev):

As you can see from my screenshot Cattura.png, there is an arrow inside the page with id=339 ("Prova 32") that seems to create the page inside that page, but... it actually creates it below the page, at the same level

- Target version changed from 7.6.3 to Candidate for patchlevel

#5 - 2016-06-13 14:19 - Frank Naegler

- Status changed from New to Needs Feedback can't reproduce the bug with latest 7.6 and master branch.

Is it still an issue?

#6 - 2016-06-13 14:25 - Christian Toffolo

I just checked with latest 7.6 and bug is still present.

In fact, IMO it is reproducible on 8.2-dev (I have not tested with 7.6, but I think that's the same)

steps to reproduce:

a) create a page named "72957", and create some subpages ("Alpha", "Beta", "Gamma"), so you have the situation illustrated on cattura1.png

b) select the page "72957"; list view; create new record; Create a new page (select position)

c) the result is shown in cattura2.png:

1) it is not clear from the position of the pages and the arrows, that the pages Alpha, Beta, Gamma are in fact inside 72957

2) looking at the last arrow, it seems that it creates a page inside Gamma, but it actually creates it after Gamma

This is the actual screenshot of the latest commit of 7.6 from git with some note added to help to understand the bug.

This was broken in commit <https://github.com/TYPO3/TYPO3.CMS/commit/2affe49148755ec49731dc24de47b452e8919437>

Due to changes in the method: `\TYPO3\CMS\Backend\Tree\View\AbstractTreeView::getTree()`

Still not totally clear: if you are in the situation described by the attached screenshot Schermata 2016-10-23 alle 10.15.01.png and click on the arrow circled, the created page will not be a subpage of the page, but a sibling.

I tested <https://review.typo3.org/#/c/50396/> and this bug doesn't seem to be resolved.
As I commented here <https://review.typo3.org/#/c/50322/>:
"If you try to create a page from a page that has no children, the arrow that signal the position for the sub-page of this page is not indented."
