Description
As an editor I want to create accessible content which passes the accessibility tests from WCAG 2.0.
This epic contains stories about all tests that should be implemented in the backend and shown to the editor.

The concept UI is very neat, I like it.
I think that there should be the possibility to skip some tests, e.g. the "alternate text" presence test (not all images need the alt text)

As there is currently no one working on these stories and as we have a restarted accessibility initiative and these kind of stories should be taken into account and planned to be developed by that initiative. Of course, the content here is still relevant and can be used for creating further plans once concrete steps to implement these stories are being taken.
