Description

The processing of data structures in DataHandler and RelationHandler are bound to each other. DataHandler allows to be initialized with a custom BE_USER instance and thus with a custom workspace, different to the actual value of the real instance of $GLOBALS['BE_USER'].

[TASK] Streamline assignment of current workspace in DataHandler

The processing of data structures in DataHandler and RelationHandler are bound to each other. DataHandler allows to be initialized with a custom BE_USER instance and thus with a custom workspace, different to the actual value of the real instance of $GLOBALS['BE_USER'].

This patch streamlines the workspace disposal by explicitly forwarding the provided workspace to RelationHandler and avoids fetching the current workspace for processing from global values.

The consideration of workspace related fields in RelationHandler was bound to the current workspace of the global backend user - however, this backend user constraint has been removed now.
