Description
The forge.typo3.org website is currently not responsive.
We like to see if there's a beautiful theme available which we can use instead of the current ones.

I took a look at what's available on the market.
RedmineUp has a couple of free themes that work in a responsive manner.

The main issue is (as usual) the extremely long list of projects here in Forge.
Personally, I'd drop the support for issue tracking for any project that has no activity in the last... say... 6 months.
This should bring down the number of projects to a meaningful level.
If, however, the amount of projects should go up again, we're back to square 1.

Another thing to consider is the amount of projects that remain, even if all extensions should be gone.
From a personal "feeling" these will still be "a lot".
Can someone with DB access provide some numbers for me here?

Is this request still requested or shall we put budget in adopting our theme responsive?
