Description
EXT.t3editor's codebase is a bit aged. The main issue that CodeMirror is stale and the JavaScript implementation for our custom plugins is very fragile and the integration works "somehow".
While we're at it, CodeMirror supports a lot of addons and so-called modes, currently without the possibility to actually use them.

[!!!][FEATURE] Refactor EXT:t3editor

EXT:t3editor is refactored to use the latest CodeMirror version (at the time of writing it's 5.28.0).

Developers are now able to easily register and use custom modes for syntax highlighting. Also, addons for CodeMirror can be added easily.

As CodeMirror provides these already, some useful addons are already registered, for example a search with hit annotations, fullscreen mode and jump-to-line functionality. A positive side-effect is that a lot of custom code was removed.

Since the architecture allows to register additional modes, the TypoScript mode has been refactored and might be moved into a separate extension in further iterations.

Due to invalid syntax used at the code blocks, the code is not rendered at all. This patch adds the missing blank links.

[BUGFIX] T3editor: Get default mode if none is defined for a field

If a field is rendered by t3editor but no mode was defined, the t3editor falls back to the default mode, which is 'html' by default.
