Description

Test in typo3 8.7.6

Case : you use workspace notification and Default notification mail recipients

If you disable "changeable preselection" no mail are send to all selected "Default notification mail recipienrs", but mail are send to other users who are manually selected by the user when stage change.

But if you enable ""changeable preselection" mail are send correctly to all users

[BUGFIX] Consider default recipients in preselection check

When checking if a workspace stage has a preselection the default recipients need to be considered, too.
Consequently the default recipients field in the TCA needs to stay visible if the option to show the notification dialog is unchecked.

Resolves: #82475

We experience the same bug. The Bug seems to exist in TYPO3 9.5, too. It would be great if it would be fixed.

Furthermore the label for the button "show dialog" seems to be misleading. I would expect that this checkbox controls only whether the dialog is shown or not. But it also controls whether mails are sent at all (@see \TYPO3\CMS\Workspaces\Controller\Remote\ActionHandler::getSentToStageWindow()). I would expect that the default notification mail recipients are still editable if the checkbox is not checked and mails are sent to those default recipients. Otherwise there is no way to define fixed recipients that can't be changed at all or am I missing something?. I mean that the selected default recipients can't be unchecked and more recipients can't be checked/defined either.
