Description

Steps to reproduce:

- make sure you have at least two "Website language" records (sys_language) in your root node. Let's name them "A" and "B".
- open the page modul
- create a blank page
- create at least three distinct content elements in the default language. Lets name them "1", "2", "3", "4"
- choose the "Language" view in the "actionMenu" dropdown
- create a page translation for language "A"
- translate the content into "A" using the "translate" mode (not 'copy') * these content elements will be created in the correct order
- create a page translation for language "B"
- translate the content into "B" using the "translate" mode (not 'copy')
- choose "A" as translation source for your translation when the dialog asks "Choose the language from which you want to localize the content"
- the order for "B" will result in "1", "4", "3", "2"

What happens:

The "localize" method in \TYPO3\CMS\Core\DataHandling\DataHandler calls "getPreviousLocalizedRecordUid" to determine after which CE the new translated CE should be placed.

This works okay for the first case (using default as source), but returns a wrong value, when using another translation as source.

History

Occurs in TYPO 8.7.8 and master.

From reading the code, it also might happen in earlier versions, too.

Patch already exists (will share it as soon as i figured out how to test it).

Tests are wip.

This seems to be broken in TYPO3 7.6 too.
Is this going to be backported?
