Since #84581 extending the site configuration can be extended with own fields. Extending the site is possible and a generic getter which can be used like `->getConfiguration()['myNewField']`.

While extending the site config itself works for some types of values, it's often necessary to add fields to `site_language` like a `siteTitle`, too. Extending the configuration works like a charm, so far.

How can I use the custom fields "on the website"?

- A) How can I retrieve the value within TypoScript?
- B) How can I retrieve the value within Fluid?
- C) How can I retrieve the value within my own Class/Plugin/Controller?

From my perspective (by reading the code), that's actually not really possible.

Any suggestions, tips, hints or even a plan how we can extend the core to make that possible would be nice. I can also help in coding if I get some mentoring in this area.

[TASK] Add full configuration to SiteLanguage::toArray

Make the full configuration of a SiteLanguage available. This is required to get access to an extended site language configuration.

To be in sync to the Site object, the property attributes is renamed to configuration.
