[TASK] Stop JsonView from setting headers

JsonView did set content type headers in its render method which is a problem since the view should only be responsible for rendering the content of the to be returned response.

The current approach, setting those headers in the action controller, is just a temporary solution until Extbase is capable of handling PSR-7 responses which then makes it superfluous to set headers magically. Instead people will need to set headers manually or use a JsonResponse object instead and let the core handle setting headers further down in the request/response handling stack.
