Description

If there are too many redirects, an error message "A redirect loop occurred" is displayed. This is misleading.

A redirect loop is different from "too many redirects". "Too many redirects simply means that the maximum number of redirects used by the underlying HTTP request library (Guzzle) is reached before reaching the destination. This happens by default after 5 redirects.

[BUGFIX] Better handling of "too many redirects" in linkvalidator

Previously, if there were too many redirects, an error message "A redirect loop occurred" was displayed. This was misleading.

A redirect loop is different from "too many redirects". "Too many redirects simply means that the maximum number of redirects used by the underlying HTTP request library (Guzzle) is reached before reaching the destination. This happens by default after 5 redirects.

Therefore, the "too many redirects" error is now being displayed with its own message.
