[BUGFIX] Remove DataHandler->newlog() functionality

This change removes the internal "newlog()" method from DataHandler. All occurrences are replaced by DataHandler->log() methods, which newlog() acted as a wrapper for it.

The main downside of newlog() is that the connection to the actual record (when writing to sys_log) is lost, and no contextual information is kept.

This change solves that problem by properly setting the table and record uid to the log method.

The main usages for DataHandler->newlog() are put into localization and workspaces/versionable handling, where the "action" is currently set to SystemLogGenericAction::UNDEFINED, because there is no specific type for them. Specific action types have been added for localize, versionize and publishing.

The next step in this line of patches are:

- Clean up the labels by always using %s or {} for replacements.
