With "recipient" you think of "responsible user"?

That would mean, the "field" "responsible user" must be read only, because whenever you change the category, you change the responsible user. Is that what you think of?

Yes, the correct term deserted me yesterday :-)

There could be an option to set a global responsible user and then an option to set a responsible user in the category creation page (underneath single page for category field). This would override the global responsible user if found.

Yes, that would be a nice feature.

But since we don't have the urgent need for that feature, I don't know when if and when I can implement it.

But I put it on the list.
